His sudden tension and immobility, the strained face and inward look, were like those of a woman in labor when her womb contracts. That was Ogion's thought, even as he said, "What did you mean, "in the Mountain?" "Very nice," said the father. "But anybody can play the fife, you know." "If it's a real gift, an unusual capacity, that's even more true. A witch with her love potions can't do much harm, but even a village sorcerer, he said, must take care, for if the art is used for base ends, it becomes weak and noxious.... Of course, even a sorcerer gets paid. And wizards, as you know, live with lords, and have what they wish." long ago. But I chose not to use those arts. Now he stopped and greeted the women. tales, and songs, is written in the characters properly called Hardic runes. Most Archipelagans. "I do have a gift," he said now, rubbing his temples and pulling his hair. them a part of the House that will be all their own, or even a separate house, so they can keep. They kept him safe. Maybe that is why the people there now call their village not Woodedge, as it. are expert mathematicians, using base twelve; but only since the Godkings came to power have they. Only the Doorkeeper answered. He said, "I think we should go to our House, and open its doors." This language is innate to dragons, not to humans, as said above. There are exceptions. A few human beings with a powerful gift of magic, or through the ancient kinship of humans and dragons, know some words of the Old Speech innately. But the very great majority of people must learn the Old Speech. Hardic practitioners of the art magic learn it from their teachers. Sorcerers and witches learn a few words of it; wizards learn many, and some come to speak it almost as fluently as the dragons do. crows are flying early and the hound's after the otter," he said. "Well, that won't do," said the stranger pleasantly. "I can't be bringing on a birth untimely. Is. He recognized Hound, though he could not sit up and could barely speak. The old man put his own jacket around his shoulders and gave him water from his flask. Then he squatted beside him, his back against the immense trunk of the oak, and stared into the forest for a while. It was late morning, hot, the summer sunlight filtering through the leaves in a thousand shades of green. A squirrel scolded, far up in the oak, and a jay replied. Hound scratched his neck and sighed. But for some decades the kings of Hupun had been in conflict with the high priest and his followers in Awabath, the Holy City, fifty miles from Hupun. The priests of the Twin Gods were in the process of wresting power from the kings and making Awabath not only the religious but the political center of the country. Erreth-Akbe's visit seems to have coincided with the final shift of power from the kings to the priests. King Thoreg received him with honor, but Intathin the High Priest fought with him, defeated or deceived him, and for a time imprisoned him. The Ring that was to bond the two kingdoms was broken. hungry," Ember said. "I was just talking, just to talk, it had no. . . ."
